

Spanning Trees in Random Graphs

Richard Montgomery (University of Cambridge)

Given a tree T with n vertices, how large does p need to be for it to be likely that a copy of T appears in the binomial random graph $G(n, p)$? I will discuss this question, including recent work confirming a conjecture which gives a good answer to this question for trees with bounded maximum degree.