

Heat-flow monotonicity phenomena in euclidean analysis

Jon Bennett

We will show how a variety of well-known inequalities in euclidean analysis, such as the Cauchy–Schwarz inequality, are underpinned by monotonicity formulae involving classical heat flow. We will continue by describing how these ideas may be adapted to treat certain combinatorial problems related to the celebrated Kakeya conjecture.